ORDERS NO LET-UP IN ENFORCING NEW CHILD LABOR LAW

Confident that the Supreme Court will uphold the new child labor law, despite Judge Boyd's decision yesterday declaring it unconstitutional, Miss Grace Abbott, of the Federal Children's Bureau, today instructed agents throughout the country to see that the law is enforced.

Western North Carolina, the district under which Judge Boyd's jurisdiction, is the only territory where enforcement of the law is held up—the only spot in the country where it is lawful for children under fourteen to work in shops and factories, and children under sixteen to work in mines and quarries doing interstate business.
